

OHIO LEGISLATURE OPENS MONDAY

HEAVY TASK FACING OHIO LEGISLATORS AT COMING SESSION

Taxation, Prohibition And Other Matters On Program

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—An enormous amount of work faced Ohio's legislators today as the eighty-ninth general assembly went into session here.

Among the major measures that jammed the legislative hoppers were those of taxation, prohibition, welfare activities, unemployment, drought relief, licensing of autoists, old age pensions and gerrymandering.

And probably the greatest task of all these is that of taxation. Action on this worrying matter is imperative because of the state constitution, adopted at the 1929 November election, which became effective New Year's Day, providing for a modified form of classification of property for taxation purposes.

Considerable wrangling and controversy was expected to mark the legislative action. The problem is a stupendous task, as well as one that is so involved that the legislators may decide to call "time out" during the regular session and meet later to give the matter concentrated study.

Another ticklish problem staring the legislators in the face is that of the much-buffed and discussed prohibition question. A number of legislators have announced their intention of introducing bills to repeal or modify the state's dry laws and the outcome of any such move is awaited with more than passing interest.

Legislative leaders and officials of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League are confident that there is a sufficient "dry" majority in both branches of the assembly to halt any attempt to loosen the prohibition laws. Officials of the league stated they would not sponsor any dry legislation this session but will be content with vigorously opposing any effort to alter existing dry laws.

Another big task for the solons is the determination of a program providing for additional housing facilities, fireproof conditions and a proper sanitary environment at the state's penal and correctional institutions.

The subjects of unemployment and drought relief are expected to be dealt with in the legislative messages to be submitted by Governor Myers Y. Cooper Tuesday and by Governor-elect George White next week following his inauguration Monday.

Although the legislature two years ago, refused to pass an auto drivers' license act, a similar measure has been initiated under the sponsorship of officials of the Ohio State Automobile Association. These officials declared that they Attorney McCallister, one of the youngest members of the Greene County Bar, succeeds to the position of prosecutor held for three terms by Attorney J. Carl Marshall.

Shoup, Beaver Creek Twp., to serve as turnkey at the county jail, and will retain L. A. Davis, Xenia, as county road patrolman.

CREW RESCUED WHEN DREDGE SINKS AFTER BEING HIT BY LINER

THOUSANDS PAYING FINAL RESPECTS TO MARSHAL OF FRANCE

Chapel Is Thronged; Will Bury Joffre in Home Garden

PARIS, Jan. 5.—With but a single decoration on his breast, the body of Marshal Joseph Joffre lay in state in the chapel of the Ecole Militaire today while thousands of persons filed past the sunlit bier to pay their last respects to the hero of the Marne.

The marshal was dressed in the uniform of the engineers, in which branch of the army he first saw service sixty years ago. About his form was wrapped the long black jolman cape he wore in the crucial days of 1914, draped to cover the stump of his left leg, amputated in a forlorn effort to save his life.

On the marshal's breast was the military medal, but on nineteen cushions ranged about his bier were the countless decorations he had won during his many years of military service. His marshal's baton reposed on a stand in front of his bed.

From 9 a. m., when the doors of the chapel were thrown open to the public, a constant line of visitors filed past.

Four guards of honor and a color bearer stood at the bier throughout the day. They were relieved every hour.

This was the first time the chapel had been used for such a ceremony in 100 years.

On Tuesday evening a public procession will form to escort the body to the Cathedral of Notre Dame. On its way to that edifice, the cortege will pass under the Arc de Triomphe, and pause a full minute beside the grave of France's unknown soldier.

The burial service at Notre Dame and the subsequent march to Les Invalides will follow the order used at the funeral of the late Marshal Foch.

The express wish of Joffre that he be buried in his cherished garden at Louveciennes will be respected for the present, although at sometime in the future the body may be placed alongside those of the nation's heroes under the dome of Les Invalides, where rest Napoleon and Foch.

The old soldier's own gardener has taken upon himself the task of digging a grave amidst the flower beds that occupied much of the warrior's time in his moments of duty.

Noise Of Collision Attracts Help; Liner Not Hurt

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Misunderstood signals in the haze that enveloped lower New York bay sent the U. S. government dredge Raritan to the bottom today after a collision with the City of Montgomery.

There were fifty-seven officers and men on board the dredge when she was struck. All were rescued.

The City of Montgomery, loaded with returning holiday passengers from Savannah, was not seriously damaged and was able to proceed to her pier without help.

The collision occurred in the main channel off Craven Shoals about a third of a mile south of Fort Wadsworth.

It was the noise of the crash itself that brought the mail boat President, the first rescue vessel to reach the scene.

The President was tied up at the Wadsworth dock on Staten Island. Captain Andrew S. Hanson heard the roaring grid of tearing steel plates as the two vessels struck. He slipped his hawsers and put on full speed for the scene of the collision.

The President lowered a lifeboat with two members of its crew, Ole Gren and Jack Hellesbo, on board with orders to row around the sinking vessel to pick up any survivors who might be floating in the water.

Meanwhile the crew of the Raritan were lowering lifeboats and pulling fires in the boiler room. As the craft plunged to the bottom two of the crew, Hele Olsen and Sol Mendes, who had not been quick enough to find a place in the boats, raced up the rigging to the foremasthead.

The Raritan settled in the channel with her masts sticking out of the water. The two survivors were taken from their precarious position by the President's lifeboats.

Two of the Raritan's lifeboats, containing the crew, were picked up by the President.

A smaller boat, carrying the captain, John Peterson, and the first and second mates, Barney and John Christensen, brothers, was picked up by a police launch dispatched to aid rescue work as soon as word of the collision reached headquarters.

The survivors were brought to Pier A, at the Battery. So hastily had they abandoned ship that many of them had not had time to dress.

NICE RECEPTION

MARION, O., Jan. 5.—Local robbers gave Russell M. Wilhelm, Marion County's new prosecutor, a reception by stealing his automobile on the eve of taking office. The car was recovered by police a short time later.

ZANESVILLE BANK CLOSED

ZANESVILLE, O., Jan. 5.—The State Security Bank of Zanesville, one of the largest banking institutions in this section, failed to open its doors today.

O. C. Gray, state superintendent of banks, said that the bank had failed because of the "general depression in real estate and frozen loans."

The bank, which was organized in 1910 as the result of the merger of the State Savings Bank and the Security Trust and Savings Company, had resources of $2,633,954.80 and a capital of $100,000. Its undivided surplus was $70,000.

W. M. Barnett was president of the institution.

MINERS AND POLICE CLASH IN GERMANY

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—A serious situation with increasing disorders and fatalities prevailed in the Ruhr Valley region today, where striking miners and police clashed repeatedly over Sunday.

Strikers at Linfort tried to storm the police station to free two Communist prisoners, but were finally beaten back after one man had been killed and several wounded. During the battle, the prisoners inside obtained weapons and opened fire on their captors before being subdued.

A strikebreaker was killed and three others were wounded when Communists in the Dortmund mine region opened fire on a party of workmen.

ELDEST SISTER OF KING GEORGE DIES

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Funeral services were under arrangement today for Princess Louise, eldest sister of King George of England, who died yesterday at her home in Portland Square here.

She was 63 years old and had been an invalid for years with heart disease.

FUGITIVE BANDIT ESCAPES AS POLICE RAID HIS HIDING PLACE

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—Slipping out the back door as a police squad entered the front door of his rooming house, Joseph ("Smiling Joe") Filkowski, 31 ex-convict and fugitive bandit leader, today had made good his second attempt at escape in less than a month.

Neglecting to guard the rear entrance as they raided the place, police discovered that the desperado had fled from his hideout a few seconds before they were able to crash in the front door.

The discovery that Filkowski was still maintaining his residence in Cleveland, despite the efforts of

SENATE MAY BECOME BATTLE GROUND FOR REMAINDER OF TERM

Insurgent Opposition May Cause Fights Over Issue

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A little band of insurgents and Democrats, aroused by a series of recent political developments, today threatened to turn the reconvening senate into a legislative battleground for the remainder of the "lame duck" session of the seventy-first congress.

This group, powerful because a handful of senators can filibuster appropriation bills to death and provoke a special session of the new congress after March 4, urged enactment of long pending legislation, protesting against President Hoover's approval of the proposed eastern railroad mergers, calling for reconsideration of the newly confirmed federal power commission, and demanding passage of additional farm and unemployment relief. Administration leaders opposed these demands as inimical to the Hoover regime, thus providing issues for a continuous political war until adjournment two months hence.

The power commission's action in discharging two federal experts favored by progressives, and the President's approval of the proposed rail merger topped the list of coalition grievances. Both subjects furnished material for a prompt debate.

The fast fading Norris-Lucas controversy, in which Robert H. Lucas, director of the Republican national committee fought the reelection of Senator George W. Norris in Nebraska, may provoke further rumblings.

The insurgents have not finished their attack on Lucas, even though they have little hope of driving him out of office at present. The Nye campaign committee, which revealed the Lucas incident, may furnish more ammunition to the insurgents.

The farm relief situation was another subject of controversy. Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, has demanded enactment of the debenture or a special session to consider other remedies.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde was scheduled to appear before the senate appropriations committee, and ask immediate appropriation of $45,000,000 to carry out the feed and seed loans already authorized for drought-stricken states.

The unemployment situation likewise commanded attention, since the same committee will start an inquiry tomorrow to determine whether the administration's $116,000,000 public works bill will furnish adequate relief. In the end, the senate will study their recommendations and decide for itself whether further legislative relief is required. The administration can block any additional legislation but the debate will furnish a new political issue for its critics.

TENTH POISON BOOZE VICTIM DIES

OMAHA, Nebr., Jan. 5.—While police worked frantically to cut off the source of poison liquor here, the tenth victim of poison booze was dead here today. One other man was on the verge of death.

Meanwhile city, county and state authorities raided every possible source of illegal liquor in their search for the persons who have been selling the poison alcohol.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ORGANIZING AFTER OPENING CEREMONY

Governor Will Send Message Tuesday; Solons Sworn In

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Confronted by probably the most important legislative program in a decade, the eighty-ninth general assembly of Ohio was opened here today at 10 a. m.

Handshaking, backslapping and jovial greetings resounded through the capitol corridors as the members of the senate and house of representatives convened in separate sessions and delved into the task of organizing their respective branches.

The senators were called to order by Lieut. Gov. John T. Brown, who will be succeeded next Monday by Lieut. Gov.-elect William G. Pickrel, Democrat, of Dayton. Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown performed a similar service in the house.

Invocations were pronounced by Rev. George M. Hughes, Columbus, in the senate, and by Rev. Homer Baumgardner, also of Columbus, in the house.

Presenting their credentials, the solons were sworn in at bars of the senate and house. State Supreme Judge James E. Robinson administered the oath to the thirty-two senators and State Supreme Judge E. S. Mathias to the 123 representatives.

The two legislative branches then proceeded to perfect their respective organizations by ratifying selections made at the caucuses of Democratic and Republican legislators held here last month.

These selections included: Senate: president pro tem and majority floor leader, Senator Earl L. Lewis, Republican, of St. Clairsville.

Minority floor leader, Senator L. H. De Armond, Democrat, of Hamilton.

AMY IS FORCED DOWN IN POLAND

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 5.—Amy Johnson, English aviatrix, will be brought to Warsaw by automobile today following a forced landing sixty miles north of here while on her projected flight from England to Peking, China.

The landing gear of her plane was damaged, but Miss Johnson escaped injury when heavy fog forced her to an emergency landing near the village of Krasnosielk. Poor atmospheric condition caused her to miss Warsaw entirely, and engine trouble made further flight impossible as night set in.

The village priest offered her shelter for the night.

"I am perfectly all right," she telephoned the Warsaw airport. "I must come to Warsaw to get men and material to repair the plane."

Colonel C. G. Martin, British military attaché at Warsaw, motored to Krasnosielk to bring the aviatrix here.

She left Berlin yesterday morning in the face of bad weather.

POLICEMAN ENDS LIFE; LEAVES NOTE

COVINGTON, Ky., Jan. 5.—Ill health was ascribed today for the suicide of George J. Moss, 42, for eight years a member of the Covington police department who shot and killed himself as he sat on a bench in the deserted squad room under police headquarters at the city hall here.

Moss had been on a leave of absence since December 24 because of illness. He had apparently gone into the squad room unnoticed.

A note, found in an inside coat pocket read, "this is my only way out of my troubles and worries."

NICE WEATHER PASSES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 5.—Cloudy and colder weather, with a little snow perhaps, threatened to break Ohio's springlike weather today. Temperatures ranged in the degree marks yesterday, and sands flocked to the highways.

The dead, all from St. Joseph, are: Winston H. Hyatt, pilot, Leroy Reimer, also a pilot although not at the controls, and Harold E. Wayne, dentist.

The crash occurred about two miles from the Rosecrans airport, in full view of pilots and visitors at the field.

When rescuers reached the plane, the three men were dead. It was estimated Hyatt was estimated Hyatt was going 200 miles and hour in the dive.

PROBE MINE DISASTER WHICH CLAIMED FIVE

MIDVALE, O., Jan. 5.—Preparations to resume work in the blast-number 4 mine of the Midvale Coal Co. here, in which five miners lost their lives Saturday, were made today as the official investigation into the cause of the terrific explosion neared completion.

Miners expressed belief the blast was caused by "bug dust"—coal dust released by blasting operations.

The explosion occurred while the miners were eating their mid-morning lunch. Twelve of them escaped unhurt. The bodies of the five victims were horribly mangled and burned.

Only seventeen men were employed in the mine Saturday. More than fifty work regularly the other five days of the week.

Four of the eight volunteer rescuers, who went into the mine without gas masks and were overcome, were still in a Dover hospital today. The others suffered only minor injuries. Two of the seriously hurt men were reported to be in critical conditions.

The victims were Mark Reneker, 33, Clyde Ohler, 40; Chas. Carnahan, 33; Simon Boggill, 27, and Dominick Demattio, 29.

House: speaker, Representative Arthur Hamilton, Republican, Lebanon; speaker pro tem and majority floor leader, Representative Lester J. Able, Republican, Cleveland; minority floor leader, Representative J. Freer Bittlinger, Democrat, Ashland; clerk, Capt. John P. Maynard, Lima; sergeant-at-arms, Dr. Alfred Robinson, Iron- ton.

Other house caucus selections are: deputy clerk and parliamentarian, Edward W. Hughes, Columbus; journal clerk, Andrew W. Gordon, Huntsville; message clerk, John P. Mardis, Athens; engrossing clerk, Joseph R. Baylor, Cleveland; enrolling clerk, Edith V. Gregg, Mal- ta; recording clerk, Ella M. Scriv- en, Cuyahoga Falls; first assistant sergeant-at-arms, Samuel M. Fletcher, Lima; second assistant sergeant-at-arms, J. M. McAllister, Marysville; and third assistant ser- vant-at-arms, Thomas L. Calvert, Reims.

Various other employees, including stenographers, pages, porters and committee-room, cloak room and bill-room attendants, were chosen by the senate and house.

Organization of the senate em- braced ratification of the person- nel of senate standing committees as selected recently by the senate committee on committees which was appointed by the G. O. P. sen- atorial caucus.

Speaker Hamilton was author- ized to appoint the various stand- ing committees of the house. These committees will be announced by the speaker within a few days.

Upon completion of the work of organization, each legislative branch informed the other that it was ready to take up the work of law-making.

A joint committee was chosen by the senate and house to notify Governor Myers Y. Cooper that the solons are in session and that they await any message the state's chief executive may see fit to transmit.

Governor Cooper, who retires from office next Monday, when he is succeeded by Governor-elect George White, of Marietta, will send his first message to the solons Tuesday. In this message, he will make a number of recom- mendations for legislative action concerning taxation, welfare ac- tivities and other departments of state government. He, also, will review the accomplishments of the legislative session two years ago.

Formal declaration of the result of the November election, includ- ing the selection of White and other state officers, will be made by Lieut. Gov. Brown Tuesday forenoon when he canvasses the official returns during a joint ses- sion of the senate and house in the house chamber.

Passage of an emergency ap- propriation bill to provide funds for running the state government will be an early duty to be performed by the solons. In view of the fact that appropriations made at the legislative session two years ago expired December 31, no funds for state governmental operations can legally be spent until this emer- gency measure is passed. It will take care of expenditures until the big biennial appropriation measure is passed later during the session.

will secure additional signatures, of voters, to petitions and submit the proposed law to a state-wide vote at the elections next Novem- ber if the present session fails to pass the bill.

Organized labor leaders are par- ticipating in a statewide campaign in support of the proposal that the state legislature enact an old-age pension law. A similar measure failed to pass at the session two years ago.

A gerrymander bill will be in- troduced during the present ses- sion as a result of the disclosure by the last federal census that Ohio's population entitles the Buckeye State to two additional congressmen. This bill will redi- rect the state so as to provide for the election of twenty-four con- gressmen, instead of 22 as at pres- ent.

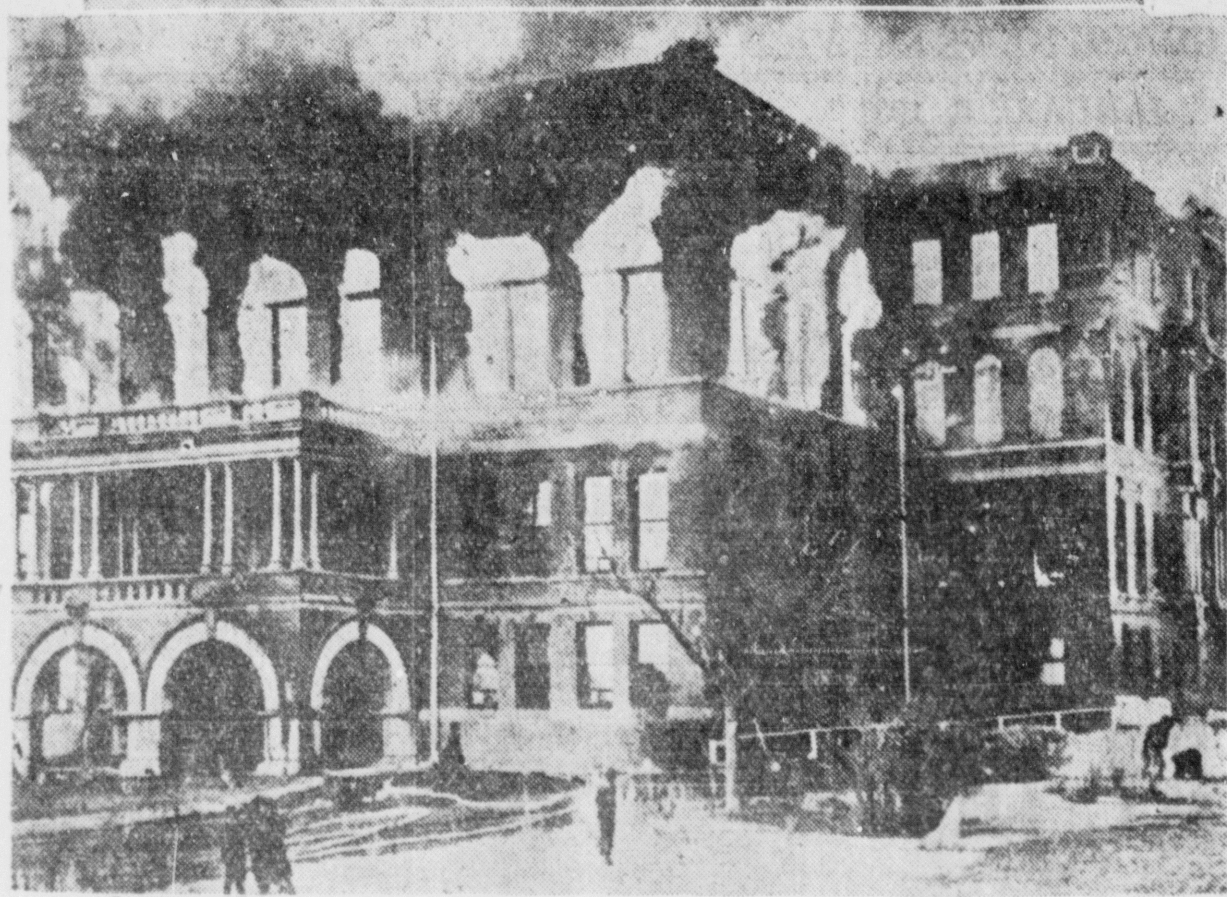

Revision of the state's insurance, election, corporations, criminal and probate codes will be sought in bills which will also be thrown in- to the legislative hoppers.

Another fight over the proposal that the state employ a state-wide highway police force is scheduled to feature the present legislative session. Just such a contest took place two years ago, but the solons failed to endorse the proposal. A contemplated amendment to the workmen's compensation act would permit all counties to take care of all claims arising from the injury or death of public employes. Lack of funds prevented a number of beneficiaries of injured and de- ceased county employes from re- ceiving payments from the state insurance fund during the past year.

It was expected that between 500 and 1,000 bills and resolutions will be introduced during the pres- ent session. A similar amount of legislation was thrown into the leg- islative hoppers two years ago. Most of these measures will be of a local nature and of relatively minor importance.

In view of the narrow margin be- tween the Republicans and Dem- ocrats in both houses, it is antici- pated that G. O. P. leaders will ex- perience considerable difficulty in holding the Republican solons in line. Party lines are likely to be broken quite often during voting on pending measures. In the sen- ate there are eighteen Republicans and seven Democrats, with sev- enteen Republicans and fifty-eight Democrats in the house.

NORTH DAKOTA CAPITOL DESTROYED BY FIRE

New Musical Instrument Will Be Philco Feature

By MILDRED MASON

A new musical instrument, based on vacuum tube principles, will be heard on the air for the first time in the Philco Symphony Orchestra broadcast Tuesday evening at 9:30 o'clock over the CBS network, through station WKRC, Cincinnati. The instrument which was invented by Maurice Martenot, French wireless operator and musi- cian, is called "L'Instrument d'Ondes Musicales."

The new instrument has the ability to mimic almost every known instrument in an orchestra and also has a unique tone of its own. The instrument in appearance represents a small square piano of the nineties. The small flat desk-like cabinet has a keyboard of five octaves, similar to the keyboard of a piano. From the left hand cor- ner of the instrument extends a shelf, about the size of a cigar box, on which is a set of little buttons. By pressing these buttons the sound of a violin, a flute, a cello or any other instrument is obtained. From this same shelf there is a key which controls the volume of sound. To get a clearer under- standing of the new invention tune in on the program Tuesday eve- ning.

POSTAL RECEIPTS DEFY DEPRESSION

Postal receipts, generally re- garded as a reliable index to pre- vailing business conditions, were substantially higher in 1930 than in 1929, according to the yearly fi- nancial statement prepared by Post- master C. S. Frazer.

Receipts at the Xenia Post Of- fice for 1930 amounted to $43,846.31 as compared with $42,543.77 in 1929, an increase of $1,302.54 over the preceding year, the report shows.

Postmaster Frazer's monthly re- port for last December disclosed that receipts aggregated $5,634.31, a gain of $323.91 over the corre- sponding month in 1929 when reven- ue amounted to $5,310.40.

BENEFIT OF PRAYER EXPLAINED HERE AT OPENING SERVICE

"Why Pray?" was the subject of Dr. Charles E. Hiatt, Winchester, Ind., evangelist superintendent of the Indiana Yearly Meeting of Friends, opening the Week of Prayer in Xenia at the First United Presbyterian Church, E. Mar- ket St., Sunday evening.

"We should have a reason for that which we do—even prayer; if we cannot find a justification for prayer we should not do it," Dr. Hiatt said. He continued: "An- swers to prayer are conditioned on what we are in the sight of God. Prayer is not always answered in our way or at the time we desig- nate but it is contingent on the wisdom of God and our need. We pray because we know God and know that He is the rewarder of those who diligently seek him."

The Rev. J. P. Lytle presided at Sunday evening's service, the Rev. Russell Burkett, pastor of the Friends Church, pronounced the invocation and the Rev. A. H. Beardsley, pastor of Trinity M. E.

Church, offered prayer. Mrs. En- ma Davidson Cherry sang a spec- ial number and the First U. P. Church choir, under the direction of Miss Mary Keeley, sang a num- ber.

The services will continue throughout the week, with the ex- ception of Saturday evening. Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, will be the speaker Monday evening.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to se- rious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified cream that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and in- hibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is re- cognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the ir- ritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfac- tory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not re- lieved after taking according to direc- tions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment, let us be therewith content.—I Timothy, vi. 6, 7.

THE SCHOOLS AND CRIME

It is customary when anything goes wrong, to call on the schools to educate the children into better ideas. The programs of the schools are already full to overflowing, and it seems a burden to the teachers to take on too many new responsibilities. Still, the schools have to change with the times, and enter on new lines of work as new developments indicate the need thereof.

At the present time the country is threatened with a wave of crime never before equalled. A multitude of young men and boys are entering criminal life. They are thereby committing a supreme act of folly. All their school education is worse than wasted, if they perpetrate this supreme idiosyncrasy.

It would seem vitally necessary that the schools should do something to give the children a powerful instinctive feeling against crime.

They should teach their boys, and the girls sometimes need it too, that while people who commit crimes may get away with one or two such offenses undiscovered, sooner or later they are sure to get caught. One act of crime places a blot on their life that can never be effaced. It is such an act of silly folly to violate the law, that it should be possible to make every child see and realize it.

Also they should be shown what a mean, dishonorable, and contemptible thing it is for people to steal or commit other crimes. It should be made clear that thereby they gain the scorn of their associates, and are disgraced and debased. These things can be made clear to the children, if presented in the proper light. Let us do our share of this work in the schools of Ohio.

MORE CITIFIED

The census of 1930 shows that the United States is becoming more citified. The people living in cities, which are classified as urban communities, now include 56.2 per cent of the population, while those living in such communities numbered only 51.4 per cent 10 years ago.

The census bureau classes as cities all towns of 2500 inhabitants or more, so it is not true that the majority of the American people are becoming residents of congested communities. Towns of 2500 to 25,000 people may be classed as cities, but the people know each other too well to be like the heterogeneous masses of strangers gathered in a city of half a million or more population.

The tendency of millions of people to drift into great cities is generally regretted, yet it keeps on for various reasons good and poor. Some people drift into those communities because they like the stir and excitement of a big place. They want some home where they can find a new entertainment every night.

Or they dream they can find better business opportunities there, when practically they reduce their chance of success by going among complete strangers.

The cities, including such as our city, represent ideal conditions. There are people and resources enough so that needed advantages can be obtained. There is money enough to provide the things the people need, and enough active workers to make public movements successful. There is business enough so that trade is carried on efficiently, yet not enough so that costs become exaggerated. People should not quit such conditions and go on to great cities, unless they have positive knowledge that they can improve their conditions.

AREN'T WE FUNNY?

She worked for a living. She called it having a career, but she was getting tired of it and was thinking wistfully of marriage and a home and babies—and a husband. Fell in love, married him, decided she'd work a little longer. . . . He objected to the working, she made a point of it—just to be independent—and kept on working. She never did stop, made a big success, never had any babies, never had any real home, almost forgot she had decided to abandon her career.

Do you like spinach? Do you make your children eat it?

A father always said, publicly, that he wanted his children to have minds of their own and to decide things for themselves, that they owed him nothing for bringing them into the world, that he owed them a great deal, that he wanted them to be independent, etc., etc. . . . But whenever they did think for themselves, disagreed with him, contradicted him, were in the least bit saucy—he smacked them!

Do you really like grand opera? If you don't, then why do you go?

A farmer's wife said to me: "Farmers are strange beings. In the summer, in the harvest season, when they have big crops and can't get any money for them, they are very unhappy and they say that the farmer's life is the worst on earth, and that a man's a fool to be a farmer. But every spring, when the green begins to come up through the brown earth and the blossoms pop out on the trees, they become optimists again and go around saying that THIS is the year they are going to do well again. Every spring they do that. They never seem to learn, thank goodness!"

Why do pretty girls usually have pretty clothes? Are they like the jewelers making a handsome setting for a handsome stone?

A man sat on a street car, watching a blind man trying to get off. While he watched, a rough, working sort of fellow took the blind man's arm and helped him from the car to the ferry. . . . The philosopher, in his thoughts, began at once to reflect on how few people will step up and help a blind man in need. . . . It was fully an hour before he happened to think to himself: "Why didn't YOU help that blind man instead of sitting there, wondering why other people didn't step up? A helping hand is more important than a whole library of philosophy." . . . He was ashamed.

Isn't we human beings funny?

Who founded the Republic of Liberia? What is its capital? Liberia, a negro republic of West Africa, was founded by the National Colonization Society of America in 1822. This association was organized in 1816 by Robert Finley to promote a plan for colonizing (with their consent) the free people of color residing in our country, in Africa, or such other place as congress may deem most expedient. The capital of Liberia is Monrovia, named for President Monroe of the United States.

Molly Pitcher

In what battle did Molly Pitcher take her husband's place on the battlefield? Molly Pitcher is said to have taken the place of her husband, who was shot, as an artillerist at the battle of Monmouth and to have saved his gun from capture by the British. Many legends have grown up about her name, and it is alleged that she received from General Washington a commission as a sergeant.

District of Columbia

Does the District of Columbia have a mayor? If not, in whom is the executive power vested? There is no mayor of the District of Columbia. It is governed by congress, as to legislation, and by executive commissioners, appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate.

Habeas Corpus

What is a writ of habeas corpus? A writ of habeas corpus is a prerogative writ requiring the body of a person alleged to be unlawfully restrained of liberty to be brought before the judge or into court, that the lawfulness of the restraint may be investigated and determined. Privateers

What is meant by a "letter of marque"? A letter of marque is a commission issued by a country at war to vessels owned and manned by private persons, either its own citizens or neutrals, authorizing them to carry on hostilities at sea against the enemy. Such vessels were known as privateers and were freely employed by maritime nations at war in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The practice is now obsolete, having been declared abolished by the Conference of Paris, which concluded the Crimean war in 1856.

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK CITY, New York.—It seemed incongruous that a poor, cheap little trumpey thing like a two-bit jack-knife, from such a source, should muster all that melting appreciation.

I knew the man who had dispensed that Christmas cutlery—a cold, hard, selfish thief, whose eye is ever fixed on the Main Chance. Also, I knew the speaky—warm, bright, cozy place, overlaid with an air of fake friendliness—thievery, masquerading in the guise of hospitality. And I knew the reason back of Monte's tremolo as he extended the gift knife, saying: "Damn thoughtful, eh, wot?"

LIFE'S ESSENTIAL

Monte wasn't thinking, really, of the proprietor of the speaky. What really gripped his consciousness and became entangled in his exhilaration was the realization that in all New York with its impersonal rush and hurry he knew of a place where "camaraderie" sat enthroned.

For comradeship in the male scheme of things is one half of life. "Mine ease in mine inn" is a tremendous thing in the life of a man. It's hearty eagerness in eating, drinking or smoking—the uproarious materialism of the thing, so essential to the masculine mind.

STORY OF HUMANITY

And read the history of the human race as expounded by this genial, popular favorite: "A myriad of men are born, they labor and sweat and struggle for bread. They squabble and scold and fight. They scramble for little mean advantages over one another. Age

SPEAKING OF SEVEN LEAGUE BOOTS

FIGURES REVEAL WAGES ARE RELATIVELY LOWER THAN EIGHTY YEARS AGO

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—The American workingman's living standard in recent years has been widely advertised, not only as higher than any other workingman's in the world, but as higher than ever it was here before. Even now, if he still has a job, he generally is spoken of as the best-off workingman on earth or in all history.

It indisputably is true—in a way. His wages run to an unequalled and unprecedented number of dollars and cents. It is a trite saying that he rates as absolute necessities many things which plutocrats and kings deemed luxuries or could not obtain at any price, a generation or less ago.

But does the American workingman of today receive, in wages, as large a proportion of the value of his product as his predecessor of a few decades back received of his?

Census figures indicate that he does—not by a wide margin. Oh, the workingman of today has a car and a radio and openwork plumbing, just like his boss, and the former's predecessor had none of them—but neither did the latter's. The old-time boss drove a span of trotters, and maybe the chap on his payroll had a horse, too. It was nothing unheard of for the workingman of yore to keep a Dobbin. Possibly there was no more difference between his rig and his boss's turnout than there is between the twentieth century workingman's flivver and HIS boss's limousine. Possibly not as much, judging from census comparisons.

Relativity has to be reckoned with, as Einstein might say. At any rate, the census folk lately completed their tally of all the manufacturing industries' output, throughout the whole country, for the last pre-census year—1929.

In contrast with it, to show how American manufacturing has grown, the big Red Ant and the smaller Black Ant looked jaws, and when Lively raised her head, she lifted Commander. Before the boy had time to say a word, off trotted Lively, carrying her burden, and she walked so fast that Peter had all he could do to keep up with the Black Ant.

Out of the tail of his eye the boy noticed that all around him the same thing was going on—slaves were making "horses" of themselves to give rides to their lazy mistresses. The strange thing about it was that the Black Ants did not seem to mind being insects of burden. Not one of them looked cross or tired. As a matter of fact many of them appeared to be genuinely fond of their mistresses, they lifted them so gently, were so anxious for their comfort. Peter was at a loss to understand it.

"I always thought the Black Ants were a good-natured lot, but they must have even better dispositions than I thought," mused the boy. Keeping his eyes and ears wide open, Peter became so interested in the things he saw and heard along the way, that he was at his journey's end long before he knew it. Suddenly he found himself at the foot of a large mound of earth, with a door in its side. Lively did not stop outside this door, but walked right in, Commander clinging to her jaws—and Peter followed. Having come this far he must see the thing through, and besides, he did not feel at all safe far away from Commander. However, the boy had not gone very far before he was rudely challenged.

lion dollars' worth in 1849 received $236,755,000 in wages.

The remainder of the problem is simple enough, is it not?

Multiply $236,755,000 by 68 and the answer is $16,099,340,000—a large sum. In fact, too large. For their 68 billion dollars' worth of products, the amount that the 1929 workers actually did receive, according to the census bureau, was $11,271,116,000.

There is a $4,828,224,000 discrepancy in this arithmetic which it is exceedingly difficult to explain upon any other ground than that the American workingman did not receive, by considerably more than 33.5 per cent, as large a share of the product of his own labor as was received by his predecessor for the latter's, in 1849.

To put it differently: Can it be possible that American wages relatively are lower (and a great deal lower) now than they were 80 years ago? It certainly would be a shock to have to arrive at that conclusion, considering how confidently we have taken it for granted that labor's reward has increased as the years have gone by.

My impression is that the bosses will say the 1849 craftsman was entitled to a larger share of his own product's value because he produced it so largely with his own hands, whereas it is right and proper for machinery's share to be taken out.

Peter's Adventures

—By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent—

What was Commander talking about? Peter soon found out. Lively, the Black Ant, stepped up and bent over her mistress. The big Red Ant and the smaller Black Ant looked jaws, and when Lively raised her head, she lifted Commander. Before the boy had time to say a word, off trotted Lively, carrying her burden, and she walked so fast that Peter had all he could do to keep up with the Black Ant.

Out of the tail of his eye the boy noticed that all around him the same thing was going on—slaves were making "horses" of themselves to give rides to their lazy mistresses. The strange thing about it was that the Black Ants did not seem to mind being insects of burden. Not one of them looked cross or tired. of the total today, by the owner of the machine.

It is to be hoped that this argument will satisfy the present-day American workingman, for if it fails to do so a row threatens, due to the census bureau's comparison.

Commenting on it only the other day, the railroad brotherhoods' organ, "Labor," said:

"Ha! the worker received in 1929 the same share of his product that he received in 1849 the employer would have been forced to pay $5,000,000,000 more in his pay envelope and there would have been no business depression."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

—By MRS. MARY MORTON—

Cheese Souffle. Prune Muffins. Cabbage Salad with Raw Carrots. Onion and Celery. Apple Pie or Ginger Bread. Coffee or Tea. This luncheon or supper menu omits meat, substituting a cheese soufflé containing eggs. Don't serve cheese with dessert if you use the souffle dish.

Today's Recipes

Prune Muffins.—One-fourth cup shortening, one-half cup brown sugar, one egg, two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg, three-fourths cup milk, three-fourths cup chopped cooked prunes, and nuts for decorating. Cream shortening, add sugar and cream thoroughly. Add the well-beaten egg. Sift flour once before measuring, and sift flour, baking powder, salt and nutmeg together. Add to the creamed mixture alternately with the milk. Add prunes which have been well drained. Pour into greased and floured muffin tins. Decorate each muffin with half of a prune, with a nut pressed into the center. Bake 25 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.). Six servings.

Cheese Souffle.—Three tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, dash pepper, three-fourths cup milk, three-fourths cup grated American cheese, three eggs, separated; one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoon baking powder. Make a thick white sauce of butter, flour, salt, pepper and milk. Add cheese and set over hot water until cheese blends well with white sauce. Cool, then add well beaten egg yolks. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Worcestershire sauce and baking powder. Turn into a well-oiled baking dish. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) 45 minutes.

Buttermilk Bread. One quart buttermilk heated to scalding. Remove from fire and while still hot stir in enough flour to make a moderately stiff batter. Add one cake of compressed yeast dissolved in warm water. Stir into dough, let rise over night. In the morning stir into dough one teaspoon soda dissolved in hot water, add one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar, two tablespoons melted butter. Work in just enough flour to enable you to handle the dough comfortably; knead well, make into loaves and let rise until light.

Indigestion Due to Emotional Strain

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.—

Dyspepsia used to be called by the English "The American Disease." Soda water fountains, hot bread, cream, sandwiches, business hurries, rush, push, strain, gulp, swallow, non-chewing, irritability—such were the obvious things the calm and serene Anglo-Saxon lords of creation saw as the causes of the American indigestion.

How much dyspepsia in America has increased or decreased of late I do not know, but since the war, and since British empire (almost but not quite consolidated) stock has declined somewhat, it seems to have made great progress within the etiolated shores of Albion. Which is to say that much indigestion is due to emotions. It is nervous indigestion. And just to show that there is such an entity I refer to my friend, Dr. Walter Alvarez's recent book, "Nervous Indigestion." Dr. Alvarez is physician to the Mayo Clinic, so we may assume the term has scientific standing.

A recent study was made of the patients complaining of stomach trouble who entered a large New York clinic. Few of them had any actual disease of the stomach—most of them had worry and fear, economic and domestic trouble, love affairs, business worries as to the cause of their symptoms. A wise physician asks his stomach patients: "What disease do you think you have?" The patient may have become fearful of some disease, had stomach discomfort as a result, and in reciting the symptoms of the stomach trouble, let fall no hint of the real thing he was afraid of. Perhaps he will even deliberately conceal mention of the feared disease, and try to guess from the doctor's attitude whether he is suspicious of it. The poor doctor may not have the faintest idea what is really bothering the patient, the symptoms may not suggest the disease, and all but because the doctor makes no mention of it, no special denial of its presence, the patient's whole life is poisoned. When the question, "What disease are you afraid you may have?" is asked, the answer may be "Cancer," or "Tuberculosis," or "Heart trouble," or "syphilis," etc.

To all such fears the stomach may react by producing the symptoms of indigestion. It has been called the greatest liar in the anatomy. Why the stomach should be the sensitive plate or the alarm bell for the whole body is hard to say. But such is certainly the case. "It made me sick at my stomach." What did? Something in the stomach? Not at all. A grew some sight, an accident, the news of someone's death, the loss of money, the presence of a rival in love, in short, the stomach responded to some assault on the emotions. How about chronic emotional distress, chronic anxiety, repeated disappointments? Won't they be translated into chronic stomach symptoms? Certainly.

Not only in the functional field but also in organic trouble, the stomach may respond when disease is elsewhere. Simple instances are the vomiting of pregnancy; the nausea, pain and lack of appetite of tuberculosis, the vomiting of brain tumors, the fitful appetite of pernicious anemia. For these reasons diet cannot be expected to cure all cases of stomach trouble. When the exact diagnosis has been made two general forms of diet may be used. They will be discussed tomorrow.

Temper Apt to Mar Ideal Union

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have a very nice boy friend who cares a lot for me. I know, I like him, too. He meets with my father's approval and all but he has a terrible temper and so I do. Every time I go out with him we have a scrap of some kind. I usually try to smooth it over some way, but it's pretty hard sometimes to say you're wrong when you're not."

"Then, too, he's wild, carefree and happy-go-lucky, never worries about a single thing. I'm the opposite. I'm sensible, silly sometimes, worry over money matters because I've always had to. My mother died two years ago, and since then I've been managing the home."

"We always have a good time together, but it makes me blue when he spends money so carelessly. He wants me to marry him, but I feel that it wouldn't be fair to him to marry him when I'm so 'old-fashioned.'"

"Despite our unlikeness we have much in common, we both love sports, dancing, good movies, babies, and, once in awhile, an evening at home. I've put him off so long I'm afraid I can't do it much longer. Please tell me what to do."

"I hope you find my letter good enough to print, because I know there are lots of girls just as undecided as I am. Worried."

As far as your old-fashioned traits go, worried, they would make admirable foils for your boy friend's happy-go-lucky characteristics. He would keep you from worrying needlessly, and you would restrain him when he wanted to spend unwisely.

The fact that you like the same things also would make for happiness were you married. The only thing that would be likely to mar your happiness would be your high tempers. If you love each other, surely you could learn to control your tempers. Constant scrapping would surely wreck marital happiness. You might make an agreement like the two people in the story. Both were high tempered, so they decided that it wouldn't do for both to be angry at the same time. When the young husband was expected home, if the wife felt grouchy she wore her apron wrong side out as a signal for hubby to beware. He was to have some kind of a sign also. One night both had signals out and that wouldn't do at all, of course, so both decided to be good natured and suppress their ill-temper.

I may have misquoted this yarn, as it is some time since I heard it, so don't crab if you know a better version. It will do to "point a moral and adorn a tale" anyway. The moral is obvious.

Just Dot: You did not allow enough time for me to get an answer to you, Dot. I hope you did not let the boy kiss you the first time he took you out. The girl usually feels it is up to her to start the conversation and keep it going, but really that is just as much the boy's business as the girl's. Talk on subjects you're both interested in, if possible, but if he doesn't seem to be interested in anything, just chatter along about what interests you. When you part it is nice to say you've had a nice time. You can show you like a boy by being friendly and encouraging, and letting him ask you for a date if he wants it.

Asserts Preference for Red Heads

—By GLADYS GLAD—

If you were to ask me who are the most fortunate from a beauty standpoint—the blondes, the brunettes or the redheads, I would reply, without hesitation, the redheads. And, of course, I mean the naturally titian haired, not the artificial redheads.

You may seek to dispute my decision by pointing out that red hair is usually accompanied by extremely delicate skin that freckles easily and that can age prematurely. But the freckles may be kept away and the skin kept soft and smooth by proper protection of the skin when exposed to the elements. And the quick deterioration of skin and transparent flesh may be obtained by facial exercises.

Though blondes may be the preference of "gentlemen," redheads have a pronouncedly individual type of beauty that cannot be easily copied. And they can retain that beauty for an amazing number of years. For that titian crowning glory can be "touched up" when it begins to fade, and even when graying begins can be dyed more satisfactorily than any other shade of hair. In fact, the redhead need never grow gray.

The redhead is the woman who achieves the most successful results from the use of henna for the restoration of color to her hair. And, although I am strongly against dyeing of the hair at home, I have known women with naturally titian tresses who colored their hair with the red Egyptian henna themselves, and had no difficulties whatsoever. The natural henna, made of the bark of the henna shrub, is not at all harmful to the hair. It is the chemical henna that should be avoided.

And the red-haired woman who is content to retain gray tresses when Nature gives them to her, is ordinarily the possessor of the most beautiful gray hair to be seen. When red tresses begin to gray, they lose color quickly and evenly, and eventually attain that exquisite, clear white that is so stunning on a matron.

With preliminary skirmishing in practice games at an end, the firing will become general all along the Miami Valley League basketball front next Friday night.

The battle ground will be Xenia, Miami Valley League basketball front next Friday night.

Miamisburg, which is undefeated in three successive seasons of competition in the league in basketball, faces possibly its strongest league foe in opening its defense of championship if it has held for three years in a row, against Sidney.

The Buccaneers, while hoping, of course, to go through a fourth straight league season undefeated, do not have any illusions of grandeur in this campaign. Each of the other league schools hopes to be the first to upset the three-time champions. Xenia Central teams having won fifteen straight games from league foes since the circuit came into existence three years ago.

For no reason at all but being in one of our rare statistical frames of mind we went to the trouble to figure out the all-time record of Xenia Central football teams over a span of the last twenty years.

The result of our research work was to discover that since 1911 Xenia eleven have won sixty-six games, lost ninety and tied thirteen.

During this period Buccaneer teams had ten successful seasons. In eight years Xenia won more games than were lost while in two other campaigns an even break was the net result.

In only three seasons did a Xenia eleven fail to win at least one game, namely, 1913, 1916 and 1924.

Teams which won more games than were lost were those of 1911, 1914, 1918, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1922 and 1928. Teams of 1925 and 1927 split even on the season.

It has been brought to our attention that Jess Stewart, Yellow Springs, has quit the Ohio State University basketball team and is now playing independent ball with the Fairmont Creamery team at Columbus.

Jess was ineligible for athletics during the fall semester at State but upon being restored to good status was counted upon as a potential regular at center. The reason for his withdrawal is unexplained.

Last season the sixty-foot, three-inch youth gained plenty of notoriety at State when he was inserted into a game against Purdue and outlasted "Stretch" Murphy, high scoring star of the Big Ten.

LL together now children—three cheers for Xenia Central's roving band of Buccaneers, who were snatched Saturday night from "Who's Through" and put in "Who's Who" in basketball circles.

Looking more like a million dollars than the currency itself, Xenia basketballers, operating together like an intricate machine, with all component parts functioning perfectly, did nothing more or less than hand Columbus Central High's hitherto undefeated Pirates a 27 to 25 beating in a breath-taking overtime struggle at the local gymnasium that was as close

This is no bed-time story concoction. We are the kind who can take our basketball or leave it alone, if you know what we mean, but at the first opportunity we are going directly to the nearest physical for an examination as to the possibility of heart trouble. No more games like that for us if there is any danger of sudden heart failure in times of intense excitement. It was that kind of a game.

Who would have thought the Buccaneers had even an outside chance for victory? This Columbus Central quintet, boasting seven straight victories this season, had also won nineteen successive contests during the last two years, excluding competition in the state tournament last March.

The terminal cause of Xenia's astonishing triumph was a basket by Howard Thompson, Buccaneer guard, in the last thirty seconds of the three-minute overtime session. This was the only shot the Buccaneers attempted in the extra period but it was a life-saver, Howard banking it through the net from near the foul line.

With only sixty seconds left to play before the regulation playing period ended, the Pirates were leading Xenia, 25 to 21. Harold Glass, blonder Xenia center, remembering the Buccaneers had been ahead

CENTRAL JUNIORS DEFEAT JAMESTOWN IN SATURDAY GAME

Patterson's Pets Are Never In Danger In Contest

Coach H. Glen Patterson's strong Central Junior high basketball team registered its fourth straight win of the season Saturday night defeating Jamestown juniors 29 to 5 preliminary to the Buccaneers and Columbus Central game.

The Central juniors lead through out the entire fray and were never in danger at any time during the contest, being out in front 18 to 3 at the halfway point. Coach Patterson used his whole squad at some time or other during the game and each player gave a good account of himself. The Central juniors played a five man defense that the visitors could not penetrate and an offense that they could not stop. Latimer again headed the scoring list by registering seven field goals for a total of 14 points. Batson played a stellar floor game. The visitors presented no outstanding performer during the evening.

In the four games played to date Central juniors have scored 105 points to opponents 45.

MIAMI VALLEY LOOP TEAMS SPLIT CLOSE TILTS ON SATURDAY

Sidney, Miamisburg Win While Troy Is Defeated

Two opponents of the Bucs during the present league cage season won their contests Saturday night while a third lost by a margin of one point. All three contests were close and the outcome in each case proved doubtful until the final whistle.

Sidney, which will open the league campaign for the Bucs by appearing on the local court Friday night, won a 15 to 9 victory over Columbus Bexley on the Sidney floor Saturday night. The game was slow throughout, with both teams taking their time and waiting for a chance to score.

In their annual alumni contest Saturday night, Miamisburg High defeated the alumni 33 to 26 after leading 15 to 8 at the half. Starting for the graduates was the team that went to the finals of the state Class B tournament in 1926. Troy High, second league opponents of the Bucs this year, was defeated in the last minute of play by Fairmont High of Dayton in a heart-breaker that appeared to be a no-score ball game. The final score was 26 to 25. Troy came back strong in the second half after trailing 18 to 11 at the close of the first period, but could not quite overcome the lead that the Dayton boys had acquired. Lineups:

The Theater

The fascinating Marlene Dietrich has, in the two pictures exhibited here, "Morocco" and "The Blue Angel," lived up to the advance notices given her by Jesse Lasky when he presented the German actress at the Hotel Ritz-Carlton last spring.

Lasky then said that she would be greeted with national acclaim, like her predecessors, Pola Negri and Maurice Chevalier. "Morocco" is the picture she made here for Paramount with Gary Cooper while "The Blue Angel" is a German film in which she played opposite Emil Jannings.

Capitalizing on a slight resemblance to Greta Garbo (although she is more reminiscent of the late

"Grand Hotel," the Broadway stage hit, which has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. There is current another report that the film will be made with an all-star cast. Production will be held up until the Broadway run is finished. The story tells of various things that happen in twenty-four hours at a certain Berlin hostelry.

Another chapter is added to the serial story appearing in this column about the movie version of "The Front Page" which Howard Hughes will make as his first picture at the United Artists studio. James Gleason, Hollywood's handyman, will play the part of the poetry writing reporter who changes papers in the middle of a big story. Production starts soon.

Marlene Dietrich

Her American contract permits her to visit her husband and baby in Germany for three or four months—and she wasted no time getting there.

Jeanne Eagels, Paramount is exploiting her as a "second Garbo" which she resents almost as much as the perennial sunshine of California.

Critics who have seen both pictures released here say that in the German film she was herself, contributing a charming, spontaneous and refreshing performance where, as in "Morocco" she was a puppet learning a lot of new Hollywood tricks from Joseph Von Sternberg.

Pauline Dietrich went to Berlin to join her husband and little daughter for the holidays and whether she returns again, appears problematical. Her nostalgia for the Vaterland during her entire stay in Hollywood is well-known and so is her dislike of the machinations of American studios. In Germany she is famous on stage and screen and jobs, if not paying Hollywood salaries, are at least hers for the asking. In the meantime, however, Paramount is dusting off the welcome mat for another importation, Tallulah Bankhead, more popularly known as the "Darling of London." She is, of course, an American who made good in London.

The real Greta, it is reported, may star in the talkie version of

Twenty Years '10- Ago -'30

Xenia High School basketballers will meet Bethel High at the Rink Friday night. Bethel has lost only to Cedarville College this season.

Crampton Lott, a student at Berea College in Kentucky, who is spending the holidays at his home, entertained a number of young men friends at a dinner party.

Mr. H. C. Faulkner, near Paintersville, who has been suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia, is somewhat better now.

A small blaze which burned the Christmas decorations off the ceiling at the Keyes and Nesbitt Shoe Store, was put out before great damage was done.
